The Lure of Mountain Retreats

Second-home buyers discover a variety of amenity-rich new communities in the mountains

By Jeff Marcus

Homeowners at the Greenbrier Sporting Club have access to the Greenbrier Resort's many amenities, including the equestrian center.

The Greenbrier Sporting Club, West Virginia

The Greenbrier Sporting Club, a private residential sporting community located on the grounds of the historic Greenbrier resort in White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia, offers access to the amenities of the legendary Greenbrier resort, as well as a wide variety of activities available only to the community's homeowners. Here you can choose to spend an afternoon on one of four golf courses, fly-fishing in a nearby stream, shooting sporting clays, relaxing in an Eastern-inspired spa, skiing or snowshoeing, whitewater rafting or simply exploring the abundant natural habitat surrounding your home. At the end of the day a refreshing visit to the Sports Complex or a relaxing meal in the member's lodge awaits.

Buyers can choose from a variety of new home neighborhoods and mountain lifestyles at Greenbrier Sporting Club. Home sites offer mountain, creek-side, and fairway views. Homes feature distinct architectural styles, and range from custom estates to mountain cottages to classic white clapboard designs.

The newest Sporting Club community with 56 home sites, Greenbrier Summit Village, sits majestically at the 3,300-foot summit of Greenbrier Mountain and offers awe-inspiring views. Along with all of the Sporting Club's amenities, homeowners in Greenbrier Summit Village enjoy their own community Sports Barn featuring a range of recreational and social amenities.

Properties at The Greenbrier Sporting Club range in size from one-half to 10 acres and will be scattered among 10 neighborhoods, each reflecting a distinct architectural style. Upon completion, the development will include no more than 500 homes. Room service and shuttle buses are available at all locations. Home sites are priced from $400,000s.
