Designing the Custom Home Experience

AM Architecture offers complete design services to nurture each client's requirements from earliest concept to final reality.

Architect and founder Adam Mull, AIA will interpret a client's original vision following personal consultations to ensure that the design meets and exceeds expectations.

AM Architecture represents a wide range of design experiences that encompass projects in the Rocky Mountains of Utah, including the 2002 Winter Olympics venues, to vacation homes at the exclusive Greenbrier Sporting Club in West Virginia. We are dedicated to discovering original and exciting solutions for each project.

AM Architecture's fundamental goals are commitment to excellence, client satisfaction and respect for the environment through innovative design solutions.

The Snead 42

Project Description:

Located in the beautiful Allegheny Mountains of West Virginia on The Greenbrier's newest golf course, The Snead, this home sits above the scenic Howard's Creek and the 14th fairway.

The vernacular building type is a reflection of the local architecture influenced by the surrounding mountains. Through the articulation of wood and stone, the home blends into the natural environment while taking advantage of mountain vistas of the Greenbrier Valley and panoramic golf course.
